Yesterday the watch hung, with numerous other silver trinkets, suspended from the chandelier worn from the girl's side. She stood on a high stool, looking down into the water. "How deep is it down there?" was asked. "About fifteen feet." "When the tide is out?" "Yes." Plungo went something in the green water below. "What was that, a fish?" asked by the boy. "It was a bear," said the girl. And uninjured the tramp piece of jewelry was returned to the owner. The chandelier being repaired, study. The moon's shadow was missing. It had been securely fastened, but the chandelier had broken and let go the timer. Going back to the hotel, the lady was spoken to by an elderly man. "Have you got any thing, miss?" was asked. "Yes, a watch." "Here it is." And unjeweled the tramp piece of jewelry was returned to the owner. The chandelier being repaired, study. The moon's shadow was missing. The Titan stakes, worth $14,000, were won by Morris's colt, Judge Morrow, at Jerome Park, Saturday.

Montana went Democratic, but North and South Dakota and Washington went Republican in last Tuesday's election.

Rev. Father Boyle, a Catholic Priest, has been found guilty at Raleigh, N. C., of criminal assault on Miss Whitaker, and sentenced to be hanged.

Judge Wm. E. Walker, a native of Madison, has been nominated for re-election to the office of County Judge of Garrard county.

Fred Douglas was sent from Washington to Hayti on the Kearsarge at great expense to the Government, when he could have gone by regular steamer for $70. You see where your money goes under Republican administration.

AN EDITOR DEAD.

Wm. J. Lyle, one of the editors of the Chicago "Stock Farm," died at Danville, on last Thursday of pneumonia, after an illness of six weeks. Mr. Lyle was a farmer and stock breeder, and a prosperous man. His paper is one of the best stock journals in this country.

* PARIS IS TO HAVE A HANGING.

The Court of Appeals has affirmed the decision of the Bourbon Circuit Court, sentencing to death Pat Hunt for the killing of James Abne. It will be recalled that Abne testified in the case against Hunt's wife and that she was sent to the penitentiary for killing a man. Bourbon has an occasional homicide, and the hanging of Hunt will cause the blood thirsty element to think twice before it shoots once.

THE HARLAN COURT.

The soldiers have returned from Harlan county. What was accomplished? Court was held with a docket full of criminal cases, and only two men were convicted—one for one year in the penitentiary, and one for life. One soldier was killed by accident—Mac Feat of Harrodsburg—and the State is out thousands of dollars. This thing of sending soldiers to hold court won't do. Better send Sheriff Hogg of Rowan county, next time.

PARTY POLICY FORESHADOWED.

Representative McCreary says that if the Republicans with their advantages are fair, the Democrats will meet them half way—The Minority's Rights.

(Washington Post Oct. 1st.)

Representative James B. McCreary, of Kentucky, is at the National Hotel.

"In giving opinions," said he last night, "remember that I am speaking only for myself. If the Republicans attempt in Congress to commit arbitrary, unjust, and oppressive acts, the Democrats should fight them to the uttermost and oppose every parliamentary obstacle to their attempts. If they are liberal and just we will meet them half way. If they are not, our opposition should extend so far as to prevent the consideration of appropriation bills and other important legislation rather than submit and allow the majority to ride rough-shod over us. Then let the order and responsibility rest on their shoulders."

"What would be considered the first overt act of hostility and oppression?"

"An attempt to revise the rules of the last House, and impose on the minority an arbitrary and tyrannical code. It is customary for a member of the majority to move that the rules of the preceding House be adopted until otherwise ordered by the House. I have looked the matter up for nineteen years and find that the precedent has not been broken. As soon as possible I will trace the precedent back to its beginning. If the majority fails to present this resolution and proceeds under general parliamentary rules, or limits the rules of the preceding House to a fixed date, it will be proof that they intend to revise the rules. I do not object to certain revisions, but I do object to any revision which will give the Republican majority power to oppress the Democratic minority. The minority has rights, and I repeat, if the majority attempts to usurp Democratic who were fairly and legally elected we will fight them with every parliamentary weapon."

"Do you anticipate a vigorous policy by the majority?"

"If the Republicans are sagacious they will not attempt it. At best they can have only three over a quorum, and will be unable to accomplish anything without Democratic aid. I hope they will be wise enough to adopt a moderate course."

"Will Speaker Carlisle be the minority candidate for Speaker?"

"I judge he will. He deserves it. I have known him intimately for years, and say confidently that a fairer, more judicial Speaker than John Carlisle never occupied the Speaker's chair."

The Republican candidacy seems to be between Reed and McKinley, but the fight may bring Burrows or Cannon to the front. In close fights it is difficult to predict who will win."

"What do you think the best policy for the Democrats to pursue as regards party management in Congress?"

"The caucus plan has the most merits. It allows a full and free discussion of measures, and is far better than management by a committee. That plan was tried in the Fifteenth Congress, but was a failure. I saw it tried twice in the Kentucky Legislature, with like result. It doesn't work well. The caucus affords the most representative system of management. I think that Mr. Carlisle will be elected Chairman of the caucus to succeed the late Representative Cox."

"What Legislation will be most objectionable to the Democrats?"

"The Sherman or Chandler Federal election bills. I have examined them carefully, and know that they are designed to disturb the peaceful relations which now exist in the South. Except in Congressional elections we still hold to the vice-versa system of voting in Kentucky. A man walks up to the polls, is identified, and declares his preference. He names his candidates, or else says, 'I vote the Republican ticket,' or 'I vote the Democratic ticket,' and the Democratic and Republican judges of elections record his ballot. It works admirably in Kentucky, and cultivates a spirit of independence and equality. We do not want that system disturbed."

"How is politics in Kentucky?"

"The Democrats carried the State at the last election by over 30,000, and won a substantial victory, though the Republicans had been claiming the State. Kentucky was the first State to go Democratic after the war, and the first State to send a solid Democratic delegation to Congress. The Democrats are united, sanguine, and solid for tariff reform. They are also satisfied with Mr. Cleveland's administration."
